Learning to Love Nature, Bugs and All: Canada's Historic War Against Forest Pests in Muskoka

a presentation by Dr. Mark Kuhlberg, Laurentian University

7:00 pm - 8:00 pm on Wednesday August 17th

Haliburton Forest, 1095 Redkenn Rd, Seminar Building

Free of Charge

People have been managing forest pests using insecticides for over 100 years, and this is currently a hot topic. In this presentation and Q and A, Dr. Mark Kuhlberg draws from his latest book, Killing Bugs for Business and Pleasure: Canada's Aerial War Against Forest Pests, 1913-1930, to address some of the major myths and misconceptions that surround our forests and the people who manage them. Come out to learn more about forest insect pests in Muskoka, how they have been managed in the past, and how we may learn from the past to make better decisions in the future.
